UK Outlook for Wednesday 3 Nov 2021 to Friday 12 Nov 2021:
An unsettled and changeable start to this period with typically autumnal conditions dominating the weather. Wettest conditions expected in the northwest with bands of heavy rain and showers which later briefly give way to drier interludes. There is a risk of this rain being impactful, however it will most likely be less so than of late. Driest conditions most likely in the south east where any bands of rain will be weaker than those seen elsewhere. Occasionally windy throughout with the strongest winds expected in the northwest. Temperatures are set to be around average overall with some milder interludes likely as weather moves in from the Atlantic. Some brief colder spells are still possible, especially in the south.
